Crestor 10 mg film-coated tablets. Paediatric population Paediatric use should only be carried out by specialists. It is recommended that liver function tests be carried out prior to, and 3 months following, the initiation of treatment. The evaluation of linear growth height, weight, BMI body mass index, and secondary characteristics of sexual maturation by Tanner staging in paediatric patients 6 to 17 years of age taking rosuvastatin is limited to a two-year period. In clinical studies with a limited number of patients, Crestor has been shown to have additive efficacy in lowering triglycerides when used in combination with fenofibrate and in increasing HDL-C levels when used in combination with niacin see section 4. Proteinuria has not been shown to be predictive of acute or progressive renal disease see section 4. Myopathy including myositis Rhabdomyolysis. Patients should be advised to seek medical advice immediately if they experience any symptoms of muscle weakness, pain or tenderness. Each tablet contains Protease inhibitors Increased systemic exposure to rosuvastatin has been observed in subjects receiving rosuvastatin concomitantly with various protease inhibitors in combination with ritonavir. There was no clinically relevant effect of age or sex on the pharmacokinetics of rosuvastatin in adults. Peripheral neuropathy Sleep disturbances including insomnia and nightmares. Not all pack sizes may be marketed. Very rare cases of rhabdomyolysis have been reported with the use of ezetimibe in combination with HMG-CoA reductase inhibitors.
