And I think it's because that partnership was lacking from the very beginning. After all, who was I really here to see? I said that the girl's lungs sounded fine right now, but that the dry persistent cough could be caused by viral bronchitis. Then I listened to her lungs with my stethoscope -- crystal clear. She deserved more professionalism, empathy and reassurance from me, as well as a clear, calm explanation as to why there were better ways to handle her daughter's illness than with cough syrup. If it's sleeping pills Mom needed, then she ought to drive her luxury SUV over to her psychiatrist's office. What would you like to do? My glare hardened and my lips curled in as I replied. I even could have told her how a few years ago, one mother in my practice kept calling and demanding the same medicine for her kids from me and my colleagues. But if you're not sure, we can do an X-ray, or you can get a second opinion with your regular doctor. Nobody's sleeping at home, and now I'm getting it too. But if you want to get to the root of her problem, this is probably the best way to go. I'm just saying, he's sleeping better at night. But, irritated, I didn't do any of those things. She had a snooty tone, the kind that says, "I know exactly what's wrong with her," while she told me her kid's story. It wasn't my best moment as a physician. If you are on a personal connection, like at home, you can run an anti-virus scan on your device to make sure it is not infected with malware. Her dad had it and his doctor gave him codeine cough syrup, and even though he's still coughing, he's sleeping better. In that sense, maybe we both deserved better from the encounter.
