If irritation develops, topical corticosteroids should be discontinued and appropriate therapy instituted. Use of clobetasol propionate topical solution in pediatric patients under 12 years of age is not recommended. Corticosteroids have been shown to be teratogenic in laboratory animals when administered systemically at relatively low dosage levels. Clobetasol propionate topical solution is contraindicated in patients with primary infections of the scalp, or in patients who are hypersensitive to clobetasol propionate, other corticosteroids, or any ingredient in this preparation. Clobetasol, an analog of prednisolone, has a high degree of glucocorticoid activity and a slight degree of mineralocorticoid activity. It is not known whether topical administration of corticosteroids could result in sufficient systemic absorption to produce detectable quantities in human milk. Some corticosteroids have been shown to be teratogenic after dermal application to laboratory animals. Clobetasol propionate has not been tested for teratogenicity when applied topically; however, it is absorbed percutaneously, and when administered subcutaneously it was a significant teratogen in both the rabbit and mouse. Psoriasis Humira , methotrexate , cyclosporine , Remicade , adalimumab , Stelara , More Long-term animal studies have not been performed to evaluate the carcinogenic potential of clobetasol propionate. Abnormalities seen included cleft palate and skeletal abnormalities. As with all topical corticosteroids, clobetasol propionate can be absorbed from normal intact skin. If HPA axis suppression is noted, an attempt should be made to withdraw the drug, to reduce the frequency of application, or to substitute a less potent steroid. Lichen Sclerosus prednisone , triamcinolone , clobetasol topical , betamethasone topical , tretinoin topical , Deltasone , More The following tests may be helpful in evaluating patients for HPA axis suppression: . However, hypothalamic-pituitary-adrenal HPA axis effects produced by systemically absorbed clobetasol propionate have been shown to be transient and reversible upon completion of a 2-week course of treatment. If that should occur, immediate flushing of the eye with a large volume of water is recommended. In general, dose selection for an elderly patient should be cautious.
