You may decide at the end of it all the fees we are paying are totally appropriate, however when you have such discrepancies where you have a drug price that is a fraction of what the HSE is paying then yes it is legitimate to look at this. On his next two prescriptions, purchased in two suburban pharmacies, he was charged 54c a pill and 60c a pill, respectively. In a west Dublin suburb, meanwhile, one man in his 60s switched from one local pharmacy to a newly-opened one selling his high cholesterol medication rosuvastatin at a far cheaper rate. By their definition, generics are supposed to be drive the prices of medicines down, but Ian has noticed an often sharp price disparity between the cost of his medication across different pharmacies in Dublin. When it comes towards the end of the patent, pharmaceutical companies often use various legal avenues to try to block other companies coming in and making the drug. Ireland's unwelcoming s Bryan Fanning Evidence of racism is taken less seriously now than during the early s, writes Bryan Fanning. After the patent runs out, the chemical formulation must be disclosed so it allows other companies to come in and make their own versions of the exact same medicine, which is called a generic.
