The HFEA is a government organisation that regulates and inspects all UK clinics that provide fertility treatment, including the storage of eggs, sperm or embryos. This is because a child born as a result of donated eggs or sperm is legally entitled to find out the identity of the donor when they become an adult at age 18. Make sure you choose a clinic licensed by the HFEA. You'll be advised on the same day about the quality of the tissue or sperm collected. Any help or tips appreciated xx.
