Simon, executive vice president for professional services at Wal-Mart. Gary Claxton of the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation said pharmacies are always placed at the back of stores in the hope customers will pick up other merchandise along the way to get their prescriptions. Last year, they accounted for 56 percent of all prescriptions filled in the United States but only about 10 percent of total prescription-drug sales. Wal-Mart spokesman David Tovar said the company will make money on the sales but will not disclose whether it negotiated with drugmakers, wholesale suppliers or both to make the deal profitable. Though the increase in drug prices has been slowing in recent years, largely because of the wider use of generics, it has still outpaced inflation, health-care analysts and industry trade groups say. Customers tell us all the time that prescription-drug costs are forcing them to make tough decisions. Generic drugs have the same active ingredients as their brand-name counterparts but are much cheaper. Wal-Mart probably hopes to benefit in overall sales, but also in drug sales because customers bringing in generic prescriptions are likely to fill their brand-name prescriptions, too, he said. It is something we intend to make a profit on," he said. Some of the reductions appear to be substantial.
