If they gave away ALL their drugs, I would agree with much of your premise. The survey was mailed out just a few weeks after these blockbuster drugs went generic and insurances were still paying us "well" and those reimbursements are no longer there. Ultimately patients picking up their prescriptions from an independently owned pharmacy with a pharmacist that has some business common sense will end up paying less than they would at a chain or supermarket pharmacy. Now then, how has the prestige and standing of the individual Pharmacist been diminished over the last 30 years? In conclusion, chain store corporate bean counters and big money insurance lobbyists have successful damaged and minimized the reputation and roles of the Pharmacist over the past 30 years. Giving away 1 drug is just a gimmick to sell more tomatoes. I cite 2 reasons in particular: I agree with Kevin. Reimbursements are way lower than what was reported last year via the voluntary cost of drug reporting. But it's not your fault. This is a clear double standard that holds the retail store to a higher standard than the insurance company's mail order operation and this double standard exists solely because of the greed and influence of insurance lobbyists. Despite this, mail order lobbyists have somehow been able to legitimize the delivery in the summer to the hottest parts of the country and in the winter to the coldest parts of our great land, medications which are being subject to temperatures outside of the accepted stability range. The Wal-Mart plan has spurred other retailers to create programs of their own. One only need to do a quick Google search to see the drug overdose is the 2 cause of accidental death in the USA and if corporate interests and insurance lobbyists continue to get their way it will no doubt climb to Mar 18, - ROCHESTER, NY In an attempt to gain a competitive edge over other retail outlets, Wegmans, a US supermarket chain with stores in the mid-Atlantic region, is offering free atorvastatin to its customers. The generic medication is available only to those with a prescription, but the hope is that the grocery. Nov 6, - Wegmans is a retailer with 81 stores located across the northeast. Oct 11, - Recent initiatives by retailers to provide generic drugs for free may end up reducing the number of potentially life-saving new drugs we see in years to come. Aug 27, - The offer is good for new and refill prescriptions; up to a tablet supply. Mar 14, - As I document below, a pharmacy's profits on a generic Lipitor prescription are still double the brand-name prescription's profits. At this stage in the generic life cycle, few other pharmacies are foolhardy (or desperate) enough to give up these superior generic profits. Wegmans' willingness to race to the. Apr 16, - Some drug stores in the US are now giving away statin drugs for cholesterol. The Philadelphia Inquirer reported on a chain in its area doing so: "Retail grocery store competition is fierce, and Wegmans is trying to get an edge by giving away - yes, free - a generic version of what was the world's best-selling.
