Macrobid is United States Food and Drug Administration FDA -approved only for the treatment of acute uncomplicated urinary tract infections caused by susceptible strains of Staphylococcus saprophyticus or Escherichia coli. And, nitrofurantoin has no activity against Pseudomonas species. This was an object lesson for me. If we are not very careful to sight through the transverse slit in the disc just above the tube of the instrument to see that the patient's eyes are exactly on the same horizontal plane one just as high as the other but place the patient before the instrument without this precaution, we are almost sure to make a mistake as to the correct axis. Is that affecting her getting rid of her UTI? If you have any questions about the drugs you are taking, check with your doctor, nurse or pharmacist. Nitrofurantoin has shown activity against the following microorganisms in the laboratory; however, it is unknown if these findings translate to successfully treating infections in human infections: It was due simply to the patient having changed the level of her eyes by a slight rotation of her head. Critics says it was a stunt to draw in business and a grab for a bigger share of the drug business. Nitrofurantoin in Macrobid kills bacteria in the urine by inactivating or altering multiple proteins and molecules that are essential for the life of bacteria. Macrobid has been shown to be active against most of these strains both in the laboratory and in human infections. It is always important to know if the medication you are taking has any precautions or warnings.
